When Santa Monica interiors firm Studio Collective set out to design Fish House, the oceanfront seafood restaurant at the Four Seasons Resort Oahu, a stay-all-day ambience was the firm's main priority. "We wanted to create more of a relaxed beach atmosphere, a sense of place that feels more like a home than a restaurant," says Studio Collective cofounder Christian Schulz. Inspiration from Hawaii's fishing traditions (carved wooden boats, hand-knotted nets) joins tactile, natural materials like jute and teak; a custom chandelier made of netted rope and glass buoys and a bar tiled in a fish-scale mosaic are understated nods to the nautical vibe. The sum: a refined seaside setting that might just kick-start your next makeover. Dinner for two $150; fishhouseoahu.com. —Catherine Dash
